Opponents Of New Constitution Answer Reasons By Supporters

Charge Chief Reason Is Removal Of Debt, Tax Limits State Legislature

FRANKFORT, Ky., Oct. 4 (UP)—Ten Kentucky lawyers including two former chief justices of the court of appeals today charged the chief motive behind the drive for a new constitution was removal of debt and tax limits imposed on counties and cities and tax limits on the state legislature.

The 10 issued a statement which answered reasons for a new constitution as listed by the committee for a new constitution, headed by Paul Blazer, Ashland.

They charged that the pro-constitution convention group's slogan of "Take the burden off the people's hands" means to take out of the people's hands the incurring of bonded debts and vesting the power in the legislature, the happy hunting ground of the professional lobbyist.

"Kentucky always has been a conservative state," the statement said, "and we are not in favor of a radical constitution which would take away from the people the right to amend the constitution."

The statement also charged that the pro-constitution group's slogan of "Take the burden off the people's hands" means to take out of the people's hands the incurring of bonded debts and vesting the power in the legislature, the happy hunting ground of the professional lobbyist.

Smoke Damage From Small Blaze Delays Occupancy of Building

Smoke damage in the newly re-decorated offices above Dale and Stubbfield will delay their occupancy several days. A small fire was found smoldering in a box of shavings by one of the painters who had come to work early. The fire had burned through the box and caught the floor on fire.

Quick work by the painter, a Mr. Paschall, extinguished the blaze. The offices had just been completely remodeled and repainted, and it is expected that the painting will have to be done again.

The offices were to have been occupied by Dr. A. H. Kopperud and the Murray Insurance Agency.

Outland Funeral Is Today In First Baptist Church

Funeral services for Mrs. John Outland, fatally injured Saturday night in a 3-par smashup on the Murray-Paris highway, will be held this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at the First Baptist Church.

Burial will be in the Murray cemetery. Rev. B. B. Sawyer will conduct the services.

Pullbearers named by members of the family are Beale, Outland, Pogue, Outland, Sherrill, Outland, Porter, White, Rob Gingles and Junior Lampkins.

The Sunday School class taught by Mrs. Myrtle Wall, of which Mrs. Outland was a member, will attend the funeral services in a body.

Mrs. Outland is survived by her husband, John; a son, John Edward Jr.; a daughter, Sharon; father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. J. V. Stark; two sisters, Mrs. Freda Wether and Mrs. Vernon Butterworth; and a brother, Dr. Ray Stark.

Miss McCarley Has Kindergarten For 4, 5-Year-Olds

Miss Helen McCarley has announced that she is now operating a kindergarten for pre-school age youngsters at the College Presbyterian Church chapel.

Boys and girls, ages 4 and 5, will be accepted for enrollment which began today. Sessions are held from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon each day.

Transportation will be furnished if the parents desire. Tuition fees are $8.00 a month without transportation and $10.00 a month with transportation.

Miss McCarley is a graduate of the University of Alabama where she majored in music. She moved to Murray with her parents in December. Her father is employed by TVA.

Youngsters attending the kindergarten will receive instruction in coloring, water paints, music, rhythm, songs and stories.

More detailed information may be obtained by calling Miss McCarley at 776-M.

ARABS ARE ADAMANT—Henry Cattani (left), a member of the Arab Higher Committee, and Jamal Hussein, vice chairman of the committee, told a special Palestine Committee of the United Nations that the Arabs would drench the soil of Palestine "with the last drop of our blood" in opposing any big-power to partition the Holy Land among Jews and Arabs.

Introducing Our Candidates ---

HARRY FRAZIER WALTERS

Living today on the farm that has been in his family for more than 100 years, Harry Frazier Walters, of Shelby county, after several sessions as a member of the Kentucky House of Representatives is now the candidate of the Democratic party for the post of State Commissioner of Agriculture.

Harry Walters was born in Shelby county on January 11, 1891. He attended the graded schools and high school in Shelby county. Throughout his adult life he has always been a farmer.

For almost a quarter of a century he has been actively interested in the tobacco industry in Kentucky and all of its phases—both as a grower and seller.

In February 1916 he married Miss Fannie Bell Goodnight. They have three children—one son, Mack G. Walters and two daughters, Mrs. Maxie McDowell and Mrs. Dorothy Casey, all of Shelby county.

Walters is a member of the Christian church and is chairman of the church board at Simpsonville. He is a member of the Masonic Lodge and is a member of the board of directors of the Old Mason's Home near Shelbyville. He is a charter member of the Shelby County Farm Bureau and has been a leader in its activities since its organization.

LATE BULLETINS

Restaurants To Cut Down Waste

CHICAGO, Oct. 7 (UP)—Enough food for more than a million persons is wasted in the nation's public eating houses every day, restaurant operators said today.

The restaurants serve about 62,000,000 meals a day, and the National Restaurant Association estimates that from four to eight ounces of food are wasted daily on each person patronizing America's 157,000 eating houses.

Through President Truman's food saving program and a campaign of their own to supplement the government plan, the cafe operators hope to cut down waste by more than 75 per cent to less than an ounce per person.

President Eats No Meat Today

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (UP)—President Truman set the pace for the American public today in the first nationwide observance of a meatless Tuesday since World War I.

It was learned, meanwhile, that dessertless and butterless days also have been suggested to Mr. Truman's new food committee. The idea has been put aside at least for the time being.

Although offers of voluntary cooperation in the drive to save an extra 100,000,000 bushels of grain for Europe poured into the White House, responsible officials said the first real test of the program is yet to come.

Newest Nation Would Solve Jewish Problem

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Oct. 7 (UP)—Pakistan, the world's newest nation, today denounced proposals to divide Palestine between the Jews and Arabs and said that large, rich and prosperous states like the United States could, if they wished, solve the Jewish problem by accepting immigrants.

Peace Time Uses Of Atom To Be Studied

DETROIT, Oct. 7 (UP)—David E. Lilienthal, chairman of U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, today gave America's industry the green light of development of atomic energy for peace-time uses and named a special board of consultants to speed the process.

Murray Physicians Take Leading Part In Medical Association Meet

Local Florist Is In Chicago Attending Floral Design School

"Eph" Huie, manager of the Huie Flower Shop, Murray, is in Chicago taking a special short course for florists at Bright's School of Floral Design. This leading school for florists has students from all parts of the United States and several foreign countries.

By taking this special schooling the "up-to-date" florist keeps in touch with the newer trends in flower styling for corsages and wedding bouquets, as well as the principles of color harmony and artistic design which enable him to produce lovelier flower arrangements for the public.

Mr. & Mrs. Graham Fly To Louisville To Visit Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Graham flew to Louisville last week end to visit their 14-month-old daughter, Susan, who is a patient at the Kosair Hospital for crippled children, undergoing treatment for poliomyelitis.

Young Susan was stricken with polio September 9, and after the two-week quarantine period at her home, was removed to the hospital in Louisville for further treatment.

Returning from their trip Monday, Mr. and Mrs. Graham reported that their daughter is improving satisfactorily.

Mrs. Graham stated that while at the Kosair Hospital they also saw Donna Ray Jones, 9, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvie Jones, Hardin, Route 1, and David Gunn, 22-months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Gunn, Benton.

These youngsters were also stricken with polio and are reported to be improving satisfactorily.

MSC Jr. Varsity Plays Univ. of Tenn. Jr. College Thurs. Aft.

The MSC junior varsity is scheduled for a football game with the University of Tennessee Junior College at the Murray State College stadium Thursday, October 9, at 3:00 o'clock.

Booster Club tickets will be honored at the gate. General admission is 50c for adults and 25c for children.

Officials at the college have announced that a section of bleachers for colored people is being erected. They will be admitted at the south entrance of the stadium for 50c. The bleachers will be completed for the varsity game on Friday night.

BANDS RETURN

Two dance bands will again enlighten jazz enthusiasts this year on the Murray campus with the return of Billy Crossway's crew and the Len Foster aggregation.

The Crossway band was featured September 24 at the traditional opening of the Hut and has been playing engagements in this vicinity throughout the summer months.

Local Post Office Clerks Entertain West Kentucky Division Saturday

The local post office clerks were host to the West Kentucky division of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks at the Woman's Club House here Saturday, October 4.

The meeting was opened with prayer by the Rev. T. H. Mullins, Jr., minister of the First Methodist Church.

The welcome address was given by W. Z. Carter, superintendent of city schools, formerly a postal employee.

Included on the program was a business session, an open forum, a tea for the ladies, a sight-seeing bus trip over the city and a banquet.

AAUW Releases Programs For Yr.; Elects Officers

At a recent meeting of the American Association of University Women, officers were elected for the year and various committees appointed.

Highlights of the year's programs were announced by Miss Margaret Campbell, secretary.

Dr. Henry H. Hill, president of Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., will speak in November on educational reconstruction in Europe. This meeting is jointly sponsored by AAUW and Murray Women's Club.

Dr. Susan B. Riley, Southeastern regional vice-president of AAUW, professor of English at Peabody College, will speak in January.

For the first program, a dinner meeting in October, Miss Mattie S. Trousdale and Miss Lillian Hollowell will discuss the highlights of the international conference of AAUW held in Toronto, Canada, last summer.

Officers for the year are as follows: Miss Lillian Hollowell, president; Mrs. G. I. Hosick, vice-president; Miss Margaret Campbell, secretary; Mrs. Burton Jeffrey, treasurer.

Committee chairmen appointed for the year are: Miss Clara Eagle, creative arts; Miss Ruby Simpson, education; Dr. Ella Wehling, fellowship; Miss Patricia Twiss, hospitality; Dr. Marcella Wolfson, international relations; Miss Woodward Byars, legislation; Miss Annie Smith, publicity; Miss Helen Hatcher, status of women; Miss Lulay Clayton Beale, social studies; Miss Grace Wyatt, membership.

Miss Lydia Wehling is chairman of the Book Group which meets fourth Monday night of each month.

John Willoughby, 81, Dies Today At His Home

John V. Willoughby, 81, passed away at his home near Owensboro this morning at 10:45 from complications due to old age.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Allie Hodges and Mrs. Hallie Simmons; and a son, Brack Willoughby, all of Calloway county. Also surviving are eight grandchildren.

The deceased was a member of the Church of Christ. Funeral services will be conducted by Elder L. H. Pogue Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 at the Ferguson cemetery where the body will be laid to rest.

The following guests were recognized by Carrie Hendon, master of ceremonies; local postmaster Harry I. Sladd; officers of the state federation; President Forrester Kurtz, Louisville; Vice-President James Boulard, Paducah; National Representative Karl Hund, Henderson; officers of the West Kentucky division; President L. L. Perry, Dawson Springs; Joe McShane, Hopkinsville; and Vice-President of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks, Chan Harbour, Cleveland, Ohio.

Carrie Hendon was in charge of arrangements. He was assisted by the clerks of the Murray office and their wives. Comments heard after the meeting adjourned indicate that the affair was a success from every standpoint.

The spring meeting will be held Tuesday in Paducah.

Murray physicians appeared prominently in the Kentucky State Medical Association meeting at Louisville, Brown Hotel, last week.

Dr. J. A. Outland, county health director, was a delegate to the state meeting for Calloway County Medical Society. He has been active in association affairs for years.

Dr. Hugh L. Houston, counselor for the first medical district, presented the connector report before the House of Delegates. Dr. Houston serves as chairman of the committee on Hospital Standardization.

His report for this committee received state wide publicity as he requested the establishment of schools for the training of hospital personnel at the University of Kentucky and the four state teachers colleges. He requested that the candidates for Governor, in the November election, pledge themselves to four principles governing medical legislation:

1. State cooperation with founding of one medical school capable of training enough doctors for Kentucky's needs.

2. State cooperation with the Federal Government in carrying out Public Law No. 725 (Hill-Burton Bill) and the providing of funds to match the federal appropriation in the building of hospital and medical centers.

3. The establishment, with state aid, of schools for the training of hospital personnel at the five state colleges in cooperation with hospitals in their respective environment.

4. Assistance in formulating and passing a hospital licensing law at the 1948 session of the legislature.

Dr. J. McDevitt presented a paper on "Management of Occipito-posterior Positions." This was a paper dealing with one of the difficult obstetrical procedures. Dr. McDevitt is recognized as one of the leading obstetricians in Kentucky and his professional associates have termed his successful management of these difficult cases "McDevitt Maneuver."

Dr. McDevitt has recently joined the doctors in his specialty in Kentucky to formulate a section of Obstetrics and Gynecology. His paper was received with great enthusiasm by the member of the association.

Dr. Robert W. Hahn was requested by Dr. Steele Robbins of Mayfield, Ky., to discuss his paper on "Infant Feeding." Dr. Hahn is rapidly being considered as one of the leading pediatricians of Kentucky.

Dr. Ora K. Mason registered and attended the meeting on Tuesday of last week.

MEMORIAL
In sweet memory of my beloved daughter, LILLIE MAI LAMB, 39th birthday. Up yonder in that city, where no darkness ever falls; Resound our loved one's voices sweetly with the angels call. The army of the ransomed, and the countless angels train; Seek echoes of their music, o'er the bright celestial plain.

Up yonder in the Temple, that was not made with hands; And in the midst my Lillie Mai, with the loving Saviour stands. If we could catch the music, and the wonderful glory see; While we are only pilgrims here, how blessed it would be.

Up yonder in the mansions, the Saviour has prepared; His faithful servants shall abide as He Himself declared. Then we may catch the music, and the glory see shall see; In that City that is builded, what will last ETERNALLY.

O how sweet 'twill be up yonder, for our joy shall be replete; As we walk the golden street, we shall meet with one another And our Saviour crown'd in glory we shall greet.

Mother,
Connie D. Lamb

Georgia Wins Over LSU Despite Bad Start; Coach Wally Butts Turns Human for 5 Min.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 7 (UP)—A week ago Wally Butts was slave-driving his Georgia Bulldogs into fitness for a game they seemed almost certain to lose today he was his usual gloomy and disparaging self.

"But for about five minutes last Saturday, the story goes, the little round man who masterminds Georgia's football destiny turned into a human being and therein lies the tale of a stirring Bulldog victory over Louisiana State.

Butts' changed character at one of the darkest moments in the history of Sanford Stadium at Athens, Ga. The Bulldogs had spotted the huge and powerful LSU team two touchdowns in the first five minutes due to some bush-league errors.

His stumbling rookies came out for a rest, expecting the wrath of the sharpest tongue in coaching Georgia. But instead of that the little round man jumped up and greeted them as they came to the bench, slapped them on the back and said: "Go on back in there and beat those so-and-so's. You know you can do it. They're big but they're not so tough. Now let's see you beat 'em". The rest of the game was all Georgia and the Bulldogs went on to a 35 to 19 romp, regaining their position as one of Dixie's top pigskin powers despite a setback from North Carolina the week before.

Today, Butts, who told the Atlanta Touchdown Club that he couldn't understand just what happened to fire up his team after he had donated LSU two touchdowns. But he grudgingly admitted that "Maybe we just have some boys who had rather 'gin than lose'."

With The World Series In New York

By LEO H. PETERSEN
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (UP)—A good-looking lad from Cherry Valley, Pa., who on May 26 was one pitch away from the minor leagues, won the World Series for the New York Yankees.

The hero was 30-year-old Joe Page, who as a rookie had shone, faded, then shone again with the Yankees, and who was just about to be let go after a long spell of ineffectiveness last spring.

Page, a strapping left-hander, came in yesterday against the Brooklyn Dodgers and retired 13 batters in order as New York won the seventh and deciding game of the World Series, 5 to 2, at Yankee stadium.

At that time all the fans were thinking about was whether he would be able to stop the resurgent Brooklyn who had risen off the floor so often before to make the World Series a classic instead of a farce.

And all that Page was thinking about was "blowing them in."

Admittedly a fast ball relief pitcher, who may well be the first of the rescue corps hurlers in history to win the "most valuable player award," Page said that he threw only two pitches that weren't fast ones.

"I gave pinch-hitter Gil Hodges a curve in the seventh and he routed it off, then he struck out," he said "in the ninth with Dixie Walker up, I let him have a slider and he hit it to George Stinewiss for an infield out. The rest of the time I was just 'blowing' them in."

Page sat quietly in the hilarious Yankee dressing room. He was remembering, when everyone else had forgotten, that had he not produced in a relief assignment against the Red Sox on May 26, he would have been sent down to the minor leagues. "I knew that I had to go that night," he said. "And I guess I did."

The records bear him out. He struck out the first batter—that crucial one upon which his career depended, home slugger Rudy York—and went on to strike out six batters in a row.

That was enough. Manager Bucky Harris decided that Page deserved a chance as a relief pitcher and he got it, winding up the season with a record of 14 victories, all in rescue appearances. He gave the Yankees the pennant and yesterday he gave them the world championship.

In winning the Yankees set many records—first of all they were the top team in baseball's first two-million dollar World Series.

The series went on and on—there were more pitchers than in any other and they gave up more walks, threw more wild pitches, and their catchers produced more passed balls than in any other classic in history.

And in the final analysis, the better team won. For it was Page as pitcher, Tommy Henrich as a slugger and an outfielder, Di Maggio as the same in a double take and little Phil Rizzuto, who hit three vital singles in the final game who proved their superiority over the team of destiny that never quite reached its destination.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN MAGGIE THREW BACK THE SHEET BECAUSE THE ROOM WAS SO HOT, SO AIRLESS. IT MAKES YOU RESTLESS, NOT TO HAVE FRESH AIR...

The bar of light shining from Miss Dolly's open door bothered her, too.
I want to be quiet and think, she told herself. I've got to think things out before I see Captain Hofer tomorrow. Because I'm certainly going to see him. And tell him in a way I'm sorry for Miss Dolly. It's going to be pretty bad for her when all this comes out.

Her discomfort was becoming unbearable. She got out of bed and looked into the small bedroom. Miss Dolly was lying with her eyes closed. After watching her a moment, Maggie crossed the big room and opened one of the French windows.

The blessed air came flooding in, damp and fresh. She could hear the lapping of the water. She stood there breathing deeply.
"Maggie!" said Miss Dolly's voice, drowsy and gentle.
Maggie ran into the bedroom.
"Yes, Miss Dolly?"
"Maggie, do you know... can he swim?"
"Who?"
"Neely. Can he swim?"
"I don't know," Maggie answered. "What can he mean by that?"

"You're sure the windows are all closed? The windows on the balcony?"
"I'll take another look," said Maggie.
SHE closed the French window and locked it. Could Neely swim? What difference could that make? Nobody's going to be swimming now, at this time of night, out there in the dark.

I wish this couch was solid, she thought, returning to it, with no room under it—for anything...
"I wonder if Johnny Cassidy ever comes back?" Neely will come back when they're finished asking him questions. Unless they keep him in jail. I'll be glad when the day comes and there are people around.

But the person she found waiting in the dining room was Mrs. Crabtree. How did you get here, Mrs. Crabtree? Why? I came in the "roundabout."

The roundabout was in the kitchen, covered over with a tarpaulin, and she thought she could see something moving feebly underneath it. What's that in there? Mrs. Crabtree said: "Oh, just a duck Mrs. Crabtree said. But whatever it was it made a sound and she bent over. Tut-tut it said Tut-tut."

She tried to rise and could not stir. She tried to call for Captain Hofer and her voice strangled in her throat. Help. They're killing another one. Help.

She opened her eyes and it was day. Someone was knocking at the front door. She got up, staggering with sleep, and hurried down the stairs.
She opened the door. Captain Hofer and two other men stood there.
"Miss Camford?" said Captain Hofer.
"She's not up yet."

"Well, ask her to get up then," said Captain Hofer.
They all came into the house unbidden and it was plain they were taking charge.

"You tell Miss Camford that the District Attorney wants to see her in his office. And come down again yourself."

MISS DOLLY was sound asleep. The sun streaming into the room made it hot as an oven.
"Miss Dolly! Captain Hofer is here!"
Maggie shook her, and Miss Dolly opened her dark eyes.

"Captain Hofer is here. He wants to see you right away!"
"Oh," said Miss Dolly with a start. "Will you get me a cup of coffee, Maggie?"
"They won't wait for that. You'll have to go down right away."

"But, Maggie, I took a sleeping pill... I was so nervous and miserable. I can't just spring out of bed. If you'll get me a towel wrung out in cold water, and a glass of water to drink..."

Maggie brought them, and then she began to dress.
"Miss Dolly, you honestly ought to get up!"
"I'm getting up, Maggie. But these sleeping pills leave me so tired..."
"I'll go down and tell him you're coming right away."

"Yes, and make me some coffee, please."

Captain Hofer was standing at the foot of the stairs. Very hot he looked, and angry. He led Maggie into the dining room.

"Now," he said, "the District Attorney's going to question you about this rowdy business. It was your duty to tell the police—a thing like that. You've got yourself in a very bad spot, young lady."

"I'm sorry," Maggie said.
But she was now alarmed. She could not feel that she had done anything criminal, and she did not believe that Captain Hofer was hostile. He was cross, that was all.

"AND now," he said, "I want the letter Mrs. Gietty gave you."

"That's just a little more evidence you were withholding from the police."

"I don't see how it could be evidence of anything. Just a spiteful anonymous letter."

"Well, let's have it."

She took it out of her purse with great reluctance. He glanced at it and put it into an envelope.
"Now," he said, "what's the matter with Miss Camford? Did you tell her I was waiting?"

"Yes, but she's not very quick," said Maggie. "Could I make some coffee?"

He gave her an outraged look. "Do you realize that the District Attorney is waiting to see you two?"

"Well, yes," said Maggie. "But it would only take a few minutes, and we could answer the questions better if we had some coffee."

He went into the hall.
"Miss Camford!" he called in a terrific voice.
"Yes, I'm coming!" cried Miss Dolly and she came, looking pale, anxious and appealing. "I'll just swallow my coffee."

"Tears came into her eyes," he said. "Come!" said he. "We've got to get going."

She was crying as they went out of the house.

Today's Sports Parade

By OSCAR FRALEY, United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (UP)—Behind the scenes as the World Series drew to a close:

Larry MacPhail, the ranting redhead, went out exactly as he came in—insulting every sports writer in sight.

MacPhail wasn't any better saying goodbye than he was saying hello. Ever since his days at Cincinnati and through his tenure at Brooklyn and on through two years with the Yankees, loquacious Larry never made too many friends.

His adieu was a dilly. In his usual ranting manner, he arrived at Yankee press quarters in a midtown hotel immediately after victory in the series and demanded of an attendant:

"Where is the Yankee victory party?"

Directed to the ballroom where the Yankees graciously had permitted the lowly newspapermen to enter, MacPhail roared:

"I'd like my own room for my own party!"

This newspaper would not print the words with which he described the writers. When the word spread around the ballroom, it was a fortunate thing for MacPhail that he was among the absent.

Few men in baseball have been able to bow out on such a high note, leaving with the honor of having welded a pennant winner which went on to capture the championship of the baseball world. But few men have left the game with so much animosity scattered behind them.

MacPhail ever has been raucous, belligerent and thoughtless. He was a novice under the big top during his days at Cincinnati, a striving executive who gained notice by introducing night baseball. While, there, however, and in all due deference to the Queen City, he did not have big time press.

That came in Brooklyn, where the redhead became a national baseball figure. Win, lose or draw, those Brooklyn Bums merit world-wide attention. And it was there that MacPhail finally hit the big-time limelight.

Came the war, and MacPhail accepted a commission and left the Flatbush pastures on which he had fattened. He came back two years ago to Yankee stadium, working a deal where Dan Topping and Del Webb put up most of the money, and he, MacPhail, became the president.

Nobody knows, and nobody probably ever will know, whether Commissioner A. B. Chandler told MacPhail to get out of baseball. But MacPhail had been in trouble with the commissioner for two years.

MacPhail had a five year contract with the richest club in baseball and few men ever make enough money that they don't want to make more. The estimate is that off of the Yankees' load, Larry picked up a cool $1,000,000.

Whatever the reason, the Yankees will remain a great team. It wasn't MacPhail that drove in the runs or pitched the strikes which brought the Yankees home to a World Series victory over the Dodgers. It was a bunch of guys named Joe DiMaggio, Page, and all the others.

Southeastern Conference Football Review

By HERB CHESHIRE, United Press Sports Writer

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 7 (UP)—Vanderbilt and Mississippi—a pair of Southeastern Conference "poor relations" who sneaked to the top of the standings while nobody was looking—prepared for a weekend encounter today which was bound to ruin at least one reputation.

Rebel mentor Johnny Vaught readily admitted that the classy Commodores was the "toughest foe to date by far for his Ole Miss Warriors."

Vaught particularly was fearful that the Vandy single wing offense would prove troublesome. So far, Ole Miss has romped away with three straight victories from teams which employed the T-formation.

In Nashville, the Commodores went through a light workout with most of the squad still aching from last week's encounter with Alabama. But Coach Red Sanders thought he would have everyone in shape to meet the Rebels Saturday.

Meanwhile, the Georgia Bulldogs worked on their passing game in preparation for the other top conference game with Kentucky. After their surprise 35-19 upset over the Louisiana State Tigers, the Georgia Bulldogs are slight favorites over the Wildcats. Butts said that he would carry the same backfield that went against LSU—Johnny Ruch at quarterback, Luke Brown at left half, John Donalson at right half and Al Bodine at fullback.

In preparation for the other conference tilt, Auburn Coach Carl Voyles accented signal timing, pass receiving and pass defense for the Plainsmen's clash with Florida. Voyles promoted Bobby Gilman, 160-pound quarterback, to the first string.

Otherwise, intersectional clashes will fill the program Saturday, Alabama, with one win in three starts, prepared for Duquesne with tackle Dick Flowers the only sidelined player.

Louisiana State, battered and humiliated by Georgia last week, reformed for Saturday's encounter with Texas A and M. Coach Bernie Moore elevated freshman halfback Ken Knoch to the varsity to work in place of Ray Coates and Jim Cason, who were nursing knee injuries. The Tiger's huge tackle, Walter "Piggy" Barnes, participated in a practice for the first time in two weeks.

The Georgia Tech Engineers, SEC top dog after top-sided victories over Tulane and Tennessee, prepared to meet the Virginia Military Institute. The sparkling Tech offensive was strictly dimmed with prospects of Allen "Dimkey" Bowen being out for two weeks with a twisted knee. Still the Engineers have little to fear and are expected to have easy sailing for the next three weeks when they meet Auburn and the Citadel, in addition to the Kaydets.

Mrs. J. D. Lassiter of Highland Park, Mich., underwent an appendectomy at the Houston-McDevitt Clinic today. Mr. Lassiter is at the bedside of his wife.

FAMOUS SMILE—General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff, smiled broadly for this new picture. The great field general will devote his talents to education beginning January, 1948, when he becomes president of New York's Columbia University. Also, much Eisenhower-for-President talk continues to persist.

Hollywood Starlet Advises On Marriage And Picking A Wife

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 4 (UP)—Don't flatter away your time looking for a nice girl, fellows. Take the advice of a pretty blond starlet and marry one who isn't.

This sifting through your little black book for an innocent maiden is a lot of bunk, according to Marian Carr. Hitch yourself to a "Sunday school Susie" and you'll be playing around with a naughty niffle before you know it.

"Men get bored to death with nice girls," proclaimed Miss Carr—who declined to say which category she fits. "The extra nice ones, anyway. They miss a certain companionship that comes from sophistication."
